

The Calvó–Armengol International Prize

Call for Nominations (VIII edition, 2023)

The Calvó-Armengol International Prize was established in 2008 to honor the memory of Prof. Antoni Calvó-Armengol, who passed away in the Fall of 2007 at 37 years of age. It is awarded every two years to an economist, or other social scientist, who is not older than 40 years old, for her or his contributions to the understanding of social structure and its implications for economic interactions. The prize, which includes a cash award of €30,000, recognizes exceptional achievement in research and is supported by the Barcelona School of Economics and the Government of Andorra. The previous seven prizewinners were Prof. Esther Duflo (MIT) in 2009, Prof. Roland Fryer (Harvard University) in 2011, Prof. Raj Chetty (Harvard University) in 2013, Prof. Matthew Gentzkow (Stanford University) in 2015, Prof. Melissa Dell (Harvard University) in 2017, Benjamin Golub (Northwestern University) in 2019 and Stefanie Stantcheva (Harvard University) in 2021.

The awarded scientist will be selected by September 2023. The ceremony, which includes a lecture for a general audience, will take place in Andorra, the small and beautiful country in the middle of the Pyrenees that was Antoni's homeland. Antoni Calvó-Armengol was a professor at Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona and BSE. In his memory, the prizewinner will also deliver an academic lecture that will take place in Barcelona.

Nominations should include a statement about the nominee's contributions and his or her CV. The nominee should have been born in 1983 or later. Nominations will be considered by a selection committee appointed by the Barcelona School of Economics, consisting of Prof. Melisa Dell, Benjamin Golub, Joan Llull and Antonio Cabrales (Chair).

Nominations should be submitted online, before June 30, 2023 at 14:30h (CET) to: Calvó Prize Nominations or by mail to BSE, Ramon Trias Fargas, 25-27, 08005 Barcelona, Spain
